LEADERS IN

SULPHUR

"A small farm well tilled is better than a large one slighted.",—Haymakers.

One remedy well studied is better than several not half understood. One of the best methods of gaining a practical acquaintance with our Materia Medica, is to master one remedy at a time ; both in itself, and its relation to, and correspondence with, other remedies.

Dr. Adolph Lippe said in substance : "The man who has mastered Lycopodium, and its relations, is well on his way to a practical knowledge of our Materia Medica. How many of us have done it ? How many have made the attempt ? Along this line I began the study of Sulphur, taking the well-known and verified symptoms and conditions of the remedy, hoping thereby not only to fix in my memory, its own range, but to understand better how to use it in conjunction with other remedies as an antipsoric, complementary, etc., and I hope, old as it is, to make its study both pleasant and profitable.

I am sure, much as we know already of this substance, that many of us can find out new things if we will ; but the object of this study is more to so, fasten upon our minds both, of course, when indicated, which is often the case. There is no doubt that it is a remedy of wide range and deep, long-lasting action and is not well understood, or much used by the majority of physicians.

Nitric acid. Is lean : of rigid fibre, dark, swarthy complexion, with dark hair and eyes ; decided brunette. It is especially adapted to chronic diseases, with people who take cold easily and tend to diarrhoea. (Constipation is the exception.) Old people ; syphilitics, sycotics and those who have suffered from the abuse of Mercury are especially benefited by it.

Phosphorus. Tall persons, sanguine, fair skin, blonde, or red hair, quick, sensitive, flat-chested, disposed to stoop, nervous, moves all the time when awake : haemorrhagic diathesis, phthisical tendency. If it had equally the psoric element it would, at sight, seem a counterpart of Sulphur, so close that one could not tell them apart. In the incipient stage of phthisis pulmonalis, no two remedies are oftener found indicated, and it requires nice discrimination sometimes to choose between them. If the case has a decided presence (evident or historic) of psora insit Sulphur must be preferred : but these two remedies may complement each other, giving each separately, and letting it act as long as it will before changing. Many cases of this disease may be cured this way. Neither should, according to my observation, be given lower than the two hundredth potency, and may be given much higher with remarkable results in many cases.

Tuberculinum. Is fast coming to the front to claim its share of attention with these two remedies. When fully understood they will be a great trio.
